Architectural Studies, Design Honors (CO-OP) - Carleton University

Summary

I am a second-year architecture student pursuing a Bachelor of Architectural Studies (Design Stream) at Carleton University. I have a strong interest in sustainable design, adaptive reuse, and heritage conservation. I am particularly focused on reimagining and strengthening existing buildings to extend their lifespan while preserving their cultural and historical value. My academic work emphasizes architectural design, spatial exploration, and digital modeling, utilizing tools such as Rhino to develop both conceptual and technical design solutions. Through various studio projects and research, I investigate how architecture can address environmental challenges while creating meaningful spaces for communities. In addition to my studies, I have experience in digital media, graphic design, and strategic communication. I have contributed to projects involving multimedia content creation, branding, and social media strategies, where I developed visual narratives that effectively communicate ideas. I am always eager to connect with architects, designers, engineers, and industry professionals to learn more about innovative approaches to sustainable construction, structural systems, and adaptive reuse.
